Two o'clock... three hours more...

Hidden dungeon, sturdy door
Down the stairs, to the mark
What lurks there within the dark?

On the floor a weapon found...

A magic sword, upon the ground

Lost by warrior, once strong and proud

Skeletal now, and clothed in mold

Dragon's hoard is heaped so tall
Hapless hostage held in thrall
Now comes hero to right the wrong—
How the legend will live in song!

Unconquerable, invincible, forever young
A life eternal in tapestry spun
Archetype of hero, epic voyage made
Time won't dim the sparkling blade

Take the weapon, take the shield
Wear it now upon the field
Fight the goblin that emerges
Glorious victory through you surges

Touch it now, the glittering gold
Lust for it has made you bold
On you rush into the pit
Through rooms and hallways barely lit

Daydream Dungeon by Clark B. Timmins for the One Page Dungeon Contest 2019. Thanks to Goblin's Henchman and Pixabay; and inspiration from work.

Five o'clock! Time to go!
We now depart the gilded hole,
The adventure passed, and told our poem,
It's time to now go home...
